

Useful Links

On this page you'll find some really useful links, some you may have heard of and used before.

BBC Bitesize

Good old BBC, this is a really good place to start your revision, if revising online is your thing.

English Language

English Literature

Select the correct exam board and from there which part of the syllabus you want to revise - for example, if I wanted to revise Romeo & Juliet for AQA, there is a podcast; plot summary (if you can't remember what happens); characters; themes; form, structure and language; dramatisation and a sample exam type question. There's also a mini test at the end of each section.

YouTube

There are some amazing YouTubers out there, BUT! There are also some really bad ones, with massive inaccuracies and tips that will not help you. There are also many who are using YouTube as a method to get you to buy their revision guides.

My personal favourite is Stacey Reay She was teacher of the year in 2017, and many of my tutees in the past have liked her style and manner of teaching.